DISTILLERY.

Haddington 23d December, 1785.

THE Farmers in East Lothian having met this day, in consequence of an advertisement inserted in the Edinburgh newspapers of 16th current; and having chosen JAMES MYLNE, Farmer at Loch Hill, their Prefect, immediately took into consideration, the distressed situation they are thrown into, by a total stop being put to the sale of barley;

And were unanimously of opinion, 1st, That the stagnation in the sale of their barley is occasioned by the Distillers in Scotland being obliged to give over business, owing to the severity of the Excise laws respecting the distillation of corn spirits, and the rigorous mode in which those laws are presently enforced in Scotland.

2dly, That the Excise Laws now in force for regulating the distillation of corn spirits, are injurious to the agriculture and true interest of Great Britain, by not only encouraging the smuggling of foreign spirits into this country, which are currently sold at more moderate prices than the Distillers of home-made spirits are able to afford, owing to the high duties, and other severe restrictions on their trade, but also in tending to establish a monopoly of the manufacture of corn spirits, by preventing men of moderate capitals from entering on that business, and even those that do carry it on, from sending their spirits to the best markets; by which means, numbers of individuals are prevented from erecting distilleries on a moderate scale, and connecting them with the operations of husbandry; thereby excluding them from the beneficial practice of feeding cattle, and from obtaining large quantities of manure for the improvement of their farms.

3dly, That it would be of the utmost advantage to the agriculture of this country, if the present oppressive Excise Laws relating to the Distillation of corn spirits were repealed; and in lieu of the exorbitant duties, and other grievous restrictions imposed on the trade, that government would raise a revenue equivalent to the largest amount that the corn spirits has produced in any year, by a license of 10 much per gallon on the quantity of spirit to be used in Great Britain, by which means the expense of collecting the revenue would be lessened, and the labor in Britain put upon a fair and equal footing, and which, as the laws are now framed, it is absolutely impossible to effect.

4thly, That in the event of an application being made to government for raising a revenue by a license on the contents of the still, the Farmers in East Lothian most earnestly intreat, That the Landed Interest will advert to the danger of confining the distillation of corn spirits to stills only of a large size; for, in that event, it is evident, as these large stills would be constantly employed, that the trade would be monopolized by a few distillers, with extensive capitals, who, residing in the neighbourhood of the coast, could, as they saw occasion, import barley from England, which would give them at all times the power of regulating the price of barley in Scotland, to the prejudice of the Landed Interest and their tenants, a grievance which ought particularly to be guarded against, and can only be remedied by allowing a number of distillers to engage in the trade, and thereby become competitors in the purchase of barley.

5thly, That it is the humble opinion of this meeting, that the minimum, or smallest size of the wash still to be licensed and used in Scotland, ought not to exceed thirty or forty English gallons, which, if working constantly, with a sufficient quantity of hay, would afford food for fattening fifteen or twenty oxen, and a number of hogs twice in the year; and, by the additional manure which these animals would produce, the farmer or distiller would be enabled to raise double the quantity of grain upon eighty or one hundred acres of land of a middling quality, than he could have done without such a distillery, and having no other manure to depend on but the produce of the land.

6thly, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the practice of distilling spirits in part from barley, without its being malted, lately introduced into this country, may in time prove of great advantage to the agriculture of Scotland, as the frosts in autumn, and precarious harvests, owing to the northern situation of the country, and height of its cultivated lands above the level of the sea, even in ordinary years, prevent the barley of the growth of Scotland from being made into malt of the best quality, and, in adverse years, render it totally unfit for that purpose.

7thly, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the tenants on the different noblemen and gentlemen's estates in East Lothian, ought jointly to apply to their respective landlords, praying that they would use their influence with his Grace the Duke of Roxburgh, the Right Hon. the Earl of Hopetoun, Hew Dalrymple, Esq; junior, of North Berwick, and Francis Charters, Esq; junior, of Amersfield; these noblemen and gentlemen being presently in Parliament, and connected with this country, for obtaining their aid and assistance in getting such a law enacted as will relieve the farmers from their present distress, and prevent the like for the future; and the meeting most humbly submit these their opinions to the consideration of the Landed Interest in general, by ordering them to be inserted in the Edinburgh newspapers; and appoint James Brown, Robert Ainslie, James Ronaldson, William Mackie, with their Prefect, to form a Committee, three to be a quorum; and authorize one or more of the number, to meet in Edinburgh, with the delegates from the Farmers in the different counties or parishes in Scotland, at the Exchange Coffeehouse in Edinburgh, on the second Wednesday of January next, at 12 o'clock noon, for the better obtaining the support of the proprietors of land, by their interposing with Government to the behalf of their tenants.

(Signed) JAMES MYLNE, Prefect.

From the London Papers, Dec. 24.

Venice, Nov. 12. Copies of the correspondence between the Bey of Tunis and Chevalier Emo are circulated here; at the close of which a suspension of arms was agreed to. The letter of the Bey to our General is conceived in the following terms, viz.

"When you came some years ago to bring to me the presents of the Republic, you announced yourself as my friend; however, I have since experienced that I have not a greater enemy than you, for no person has done me so much ill. If you have not deceived me, and are willing to shew yourself really my friend, remove your squadron, and remain only with your own ship, and we will treat together of peace."

The Chevalier Emo answered him, that he was ready to convince him of the truth of the sentiments which he had at first expressed, by suspending hostilities; but that the Republic having ordered him to make war, not peace, he must write to the Senate to obtain permission to treat of the latter; that in the mean time he would enter into a truce with him for 40 days, during which time he should receive orders from the Senate; that he might prepare his propositions; but he exhorted him not to do any thing incompatible with the dignity of the Senate.

The General, in dispatching to the Senate the Bey's letter and his answer, and requesting their orders, observed in one of his private dispatches, that if he received an order to continue hostilities, he proposed to return to Sfax, and that he had taken such measures as would enable him entirely to destroy that town, after which he would go to Biserta to do fresh damages there; as to the Gulf of Tunis, his dispositions will permit him to stay during the winter in that road.

We are assured, that the Senate hath agreed that the General shall have a power to make peace or continue the war till he obtains the most favourable conditions. The decree grants him powers of such an extent as the annals of the Republic afford few examples of.

LONDON, Dec. 24.

A few days since, a young gentleman, of distinguished family, having, from unavoidable misfortunes, been reduced to a very distressed situation, his case accidentally became known to the second personage in the kingdom, who, with that liberality which so strongly marks his character, directed his Treasurer to issue sufficient sums to free the gentleman from his incumbrances, and immediately after recommended him to a lucrative and honourable employment.

Yesterday a deputation of merchants on the American trade waited on the Marquis of Carmarthen, at his office in Cleveland-row, to propose some new regulations in commerce.

Lord Thurlow it is said has obtained the promise of an Earldom whenever he quits the Seals, with the reversion thereof to the children of his brother, the Bishop of Lincoln, or in default thereof to another branch of his Lordship's family.

It is now agreed that the salaries of the Scotch Judges shall be increased, without resorting to the pitiful measure of diminishing their number. The Barons of the Exchequer in Scotland are also to be included.

The treaty between the Emperor and the Dutch was ratified on the 8th instant by the States-General. The Baron de Reischach resumes his station at the Hague as Envoy Extraordinary from the Court of Vienna; and the Baron de Haefen goes to Vienna from the States, and the Baron de Hop to Brussels in the same capacity.

Letters from Lisbon, dated December 9. mention, that the Court had been very much alarmed at the commercial regulation carrying on between France and Great Britain; and that the consequences of such a measure taking place, as the relaxation of the duties on French wines on the part of England, and the imports on British hardware on that of France, would in all probability cause a total prohibition of British manufactures in the whole kingdom of Portugal.

It is now generally believed, that the East-Indies will be the theatre of the next maritime war, in which this country will be engaged; and consequently that it will be the most ruinous in point of expence, on account of the immense distance, that Britain was ever cursed with. The Dutch are so well aware that the bulk of our marine force will be employed in that quarter, that they are already taking every possible precaution for putting their possessions in that part of the world in a good posture of defence. For this purpose they have concluded a subsidiary treaty with the Rhingrave of Salm, by which that Prince has agreed to furnish no less a body of his troops than six thousand, to be sent to the Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, and Batavia, for the defence of those possessions.

Wednesday Captain Williamson, of the Ganges East-India-man; Captain Gregory, of the Manchip; and Captain Pierce, of the Halfwell, having completed their ladings at Gravefend, took leave of the Court of Directors to proceed on their respective voyages.

We are credibly informed, that a few days since there lay at Helvoetfluyt, two Dutch frigates under sailing orders for the East Indies. On board one of them, named the Ceres, was 70 English sailors, and upwards of 40 on board the Scipio, who had been trepanned by the crimps to enter into the Dutch service.—It is to be hoped they may be met in the Channel by some of our cruisers, to prevent the loss of so many brave men to this country, of which Government will do well to take notice, as the account comes well authenticated.

Prince Ernest Augustus is to make his first naval essay next spring on board the ship in which Commodore Gower is designed to go to the Baltic, with a small squadron. One of the new two-deckers, of 44 guns, is expected to be selected for this purpose. The Commodore is expected to sail the middle of April, and after a short cruise is to return to Copenhagen, from whence the Prince Royal of Denmark will be then ready to sail for England in the Prince Frederick, a new yacht built at Deptford at the King's own private expence, and by his Majesty presented to his intended son-in-law, whom Commodore Gower is to convoy safe to England, for the purpose of marrying the Princess Charlotte.

There is not a power in Europe that have made a more rapid progress in the augmentation of their naval forces than the States-General of the United Provinces, who have in the course of four or five years increased their navy with 15 ships of the line, from 56 to 76 guns; 26 large frigates, from 20 to 24 guns; and 23 sloops, from 10 to 18 guns; besides what are now laid down on the stocks.

A Commodore, with two or three men of war, will be sent into the Baltick early in the spring, as a squadron of observation; and it is even said that Commodore Gower, who was lately in the Hebe frigate, of 36 guns, in her cruise to the North with Prince William Henry, will have the command, which is expected to be of no small importance: commissions are already sent to Denmark to provide for the victualling of these ships. A fleet of observation has never been sent to that quarter heretofore, except when some extraordinary commotions were expected, or at the desire of some of the northern powers in alliance with Great Britain: which of these is now the cause of the squadron being ordered, or whether it is merely a motion formed in the British cabinet, is hard to guess at present, though time may unravel it.

We are assured, that the King of France has not only undertaken to mediate between the Courts of Vienna and Berlin, but that conferences have actually been opened on that head. There is, however, little hope that his Most Christian Majesty will be able to avert the storm which now threatens Germany, and perhaps all Europe. For there are two obstacles in the way of an agreement, and which will probably render the pacific endeavours of the Court of France totally fruitless: The first is, that the latter has called upon the British Cabinet to concur in the mediation, and therefore requires that our King shall take upon him the office of co-mediator. This is to require an inconsistency, at least, if not an impossibility, on our part, as the King was the second person in Germany, who, in his capacity of Elector of Hanover, declared for the German league. The second obstacle, and which is perhaps the greater of the two, is this, — That the King of Prussia has absolutely declared, that all mediation will be nugatory and useless, so long as the Emperor shall refuse to renounce every idea of an exchange of Bavaria, as well for the future as for the present. This is what the Emperor will scarcely ever do, as he seems determined to make himself master of Bavaria, cost what it will. Should his Imperial Majesty, however, gratify the King of Prussia on this head, then the object of a mediation would fall to the ground, as there would be no longer any subject of difference between the two monarchs. There is reason, therefore, to believe, that the mediation of France will either way prove useless.

They write from Paris, that both Houses of Parliament met the 15th of this month, on the Cardinal's business. The result of their deliberations was to issue six decrees against the Cardinal, the Comte and Comtesse Calostro, the Comte and Comtesse de la Motte, and Baron Planta. Out of 57 votes, 47 were for the decree. This fatal blow only stunned the partisans of the Prelate, who has very few friends, but not one among his colleagues, by whom he is universally despised as a disgrace to the clerical habit, and as an odious example of immorality. His emissaries were much affected, and repeatedly exclaimed, "Que les hommes sont faux! How deceitful are men!"

We hear from Constantinople, that since the death of the third son of the Grand Signior, his second has been attacked by the small-pox, the same fatal disorder which carried off his brother. The havoc made by this disease is indeed shocking, no less than one hundred thousand having died of it since September last.

Extract of a letter from Copenhagen, Dec. 1.

"The Prince pleased with the new yacht, a present from his uncle the King of England, has already made a short cruise in her as far as the Road of Cowanabour, and returned to this port the 26th instant. The King has lately settled on his Royal Highness the Seat of Fredericksall with all its appurtenances, and an handsome endowment on his intended marriage with the Princess of England, which will be celebrated in London some time in May next."

Extract of a letter from Halifax, Nova-Scotia, November 17, 1785.

"On the 13th instant arrived here Col. Dundas, and Jeremiah Pemberton, Esq; Commissioners, appointed by the British Parliament, to examine the claims of Loyalists, in this, and the Colony of New Brunswick, &c. &c. The following address was presented them soon after their arrival. To the Honourable Colonel Thomas Dundas, and Jeremiah Pemberton, Esqrs. Commissioners, appointed by the British Legislature, to examine the claims of the Loyalists in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, &c. &c.

"We his Majesty's loyal and dutiful subjects being resident chiefly in this place, and part of that numerous body of people, who, in consequence of their attachment to their Sovereign, have taken refuge in this Province from the United States of America, beg leave, with great sincerity, to congratulate you on your safe arrival.

"The interesting business on which you are charged, as it will most assuredly immortalize the liberality and good faith of the British nation, so it will also perpetuate your names, already so distinguished, to remotest posterity.

"With sincere pleasure we flatter ourselves that the knowledge of these Provinces, which your researches will lead you to, will fully evince that they are blessed with all that moderation can wish, and that our exertions to render ourselves comfortable and happy, have not been inconsiderable.

"Sensible, Gentlemen, as we are, of the baneful effects of civil discord and contention, and convinced too, that under the ineffable patronage of the British Government, our perseverance will proclaim these Provinces to be an asylum for loyalty in distress; so, we have no evils to apprehend, while our invariable object is to deserve and receive a continuance of it: "We most ardently pray that your investigations may lead you to the discovery of the real truth.—There can be but one wish—that each impostor may be detected, and that the truly unfortunate may never be ungrateful to that munificent hand which relieves his distresses.

"Permit us, Gentlemen, to add, that the individuals who present this address, are actuated by no other motive than that which arises from hearts overflowing with gratitude to our most gracious Sovereign and the British nation; and although we are happy to say that many of us have no claims to make, yet this last great and generous attention to our suffering friends affect us most sensibly."

Signed by fifty-four respectable persons.

To which address the Gentlemen returned the following answer.

"Gentlemen,

"We beg leave to return our thanks for your congratulations on our arrival, and for the handsome manner in which you are pleased to express yourselves towards us.

"It will give us the highest satisfaction, if, pursuing the generous intention of Parliament, we are able, by the most unwearied attention on our part, to assist in relieving those meritorious persons who have suffered from their loyalty, and attachment to the British Government.

"We heartily agree with you in the sincere wish that our enquiries may lead to the discovery of real truth, an object which, with persons of dispositions honourable as those which you have manifested, it will not be difficult, we trust, to obtain.

"We perceive with pleasure these sentiments of gratitude which you entertain towards his Majesty and the British nation; and we cannot but think that the generosity of their conduct, thus warmly acknowledged, by those who more immediately partake in its benefits, will be admitted and applauded by all mankind.

"We are, Gentlemen,

"Your most obedient, and most humble servants,

PRINCIPLES.

No politician ought to possess many principles.

The principle of self-interest ought never to be the first.

The principle of convenience, the next.

If he professes to have many principles, the public will expect a display of them. If he fails in one, the public will suppose, may say, and swear, that he wants all of them.

In politics, it is best never to possess any, and to practise as may be found most convenient.

They are, in common estimation, the greatest and the wisest men, who neither have, nor pretend to have any principle at all.

EDINBURGH.

Extract of a letter from London, Dec. 24.

"All the Royal Family have removed to Windsor, where they mean to pass the Christmas with some of the younger branches of our nobility, except the Prince of Wales, who set off this morning for Lord Derby's seat near Epom, where he intends remaining till the end of next week.

"It is now pretty clear, that so far from any thing being done with respect to the commercial treaty with France, against the meeting of Parliament, Mr Eden will not set off on his errand till then. The business is now become so nice a matter, it is thought the Minister will not much chuse he should proceed to Paris, till the House shall have an opportunity of offering any instructions or hints on the occasion, previous to his setting out, should it be inclined to do it.

"Lord Carlisle has been several times closetted with a great personage within these few days, but nothing respecting the much-talked-of change of a part of the Administration is now expected to be concluded on till after the holidays.

"It is true that Sir Joseph Yorke has lately been invited to enlist again under the Corps Diplomatique, some say to Russia, but that he has declined any thing of the kind."

Died at Perth, the 26th December current, Mrs Dick, spouse to Captain William Dick, late of the 64th regiment of foot.

This day, the Presbytery of Edinburgh met here, when the Committee appointed by the Presbytery at their last meeting, to draw up a memorial, and consult counsel on the right of the Magistrates and Town Council to grant presentations similar to the one given to Dr Andrew Hunter, reported, that they had drawn up a memorial on the subject, which had been laid before counsel; but that these Gentlemen had not as yet had time to give their opinion upon it. A motion was therefore made, that this business should again be delayed till next Presbytery meeting, by which time the opinion of the counsel would be received. This motion being agreed to, Bailie Dickson, in name of himself, Mr Archibald Macdowal, and Mr Hugh Buchanan, the Commissioners appointed by the Magistrates and Town-Council, protested against this delay, and produced their reasons of dissent, which they craved might be recorded. This being agreed to, Dr Erskine and Mr Kemp were appointed to draw up answers to the protest, which are likewise to enter the records of Presbytery. There was also produced to the Presbytery an unanimous call from the parish of St Cuthbert in favour of Mr William Paul, minister of Newbattle, to be minister of that parish, in consequence of a presen-

On the 23d instant, the presbytery of Lochmaben ordained Mr William Sibbald minister of the parish of Johnstone, after an excellent sermon by the Rev. Mr David Dickson of St Mungo.

In the hard gale of wind on Saturday night last, many ships must have suffered. We have already received accounts of the following: Two English vessels were put ashore in St Andrews bay; two at Holy Island, one of them an English vessel, from Malaga, said to be foundered; a collier was likewise lost on this side Newcastle.

The vessel found at sea, and sent into Dunbar by Captain Wilson of the Racehorse, proves to be the Polly of Hull, which had been sent out to the Baltic to take in the cargo and stores of the Empress, which had been wrecked near Revel.

The cargo consists of tallow, iron, and deals. The crew had taken to their boat, and were picked up by another ship, and got safe to Hull.

On Saturday night, at twelve o'clock, a fire broke out in the bake-house of Mr Greig, in St David's Lane, near St Andrew's Square, which entirely consumed about 70 bags of flour, and damaged the building considerably.

By the activity of the Magistrates, the fire was prevented from spreading to the adjoining houses.

Thursday night last, as Mr John Baird, farmer at Parkhouse, was going home, through the darkness of the night he missed his way, and fell into the Clyde.—His body was found next day.

A few days ago, a servant girl, going across the water of Fiddich, on an old bridge, fell in and was drowned.

By order of the General Meeting of Managers of the Charity Work-house of Canongate, an EXTRAORDINARY COLLECTION will be made at the Church-door of Canongate, on Sabbath first, being the 1st day of January 1786.

As many of the most opulent inhabitants have not an opportunity of contributing at the church-door, it is requested they will be pleased to send their collection to Bailie George Rae Leith Wynd, Treasurer to the said Poor House, who will grant receipts, if required. A Box is also placed in the Charity House, to receive the mite of them who do not desire any receipt.

Extract of a letter from Nairn, Dec. 23.
“Yesterday, came on the election of a member to serve in Parliament for this county, in room of the late Captain Alexander Campbell. The candidates were, Captain George Campbell of the navy, brother to Mr Campbell of Calder, and Alexander Brodie, Esq; brother to Mr Brodie of Brodie. By the absence of Calder and his brother, who are now abroad—the defection of some friends who held confidential votes of the family—and the breach of engagements of others who had early declared their attachment, Mr Brodie started with a majority of 8 to 7; and the party availing themselves thereof, not only continued on the roll two freeholders whose qualifications were clearly annihilated, but also admitted a gentleman for lands situated in a different county, whereby they elected Mr Alexander Brodie by a nominal majority of 9 to 7.—But the merits of this election are to be made the subject of a petition to the House of Commons, and of complaints to the Court of Session.”

Extract of a letter from Forres.
“On the evening of Thursday last, the 22d current, upon the agreeable account arriving at this place of the election for the county of Nairn being decided in favour of Alexander Brodie, Esq; late of Madras, an universal joy diffused itself among the inhabitants. The bells were set ringing; bonfires were raised in the streets and on the tops of the neighbouring mountains. The Magistrates and principal inhabitants, who could not do themselves the honour of attending their most respectable countryman at his election, went to the cross, and drank his health and prosperity; at the market-place, under repeated volleys from a party of the military. Illuminations ensued, and many emblematical figures were exhibited in honour of the worthy member.”

DISTILLERY.

Colinton, December 27. 1785.
THE Farmers of this parish being met, to take into consideration, their present distress, in not having a market for barley; after consulting Mr Robert Wight Preses, the meeting came to the following Resolves:

That their distress has been solely owing to the suppressing the midling class of Distillers; for no sooner was the mode adopted, of executing the Excise-laws put in practice about twelve months ago, upon that description of traders, than barley fell almost a third of its price; and to such a height has the evil operated, that merchants cannot now be got for it.

That the high rents now paid for land would never have been thought of, far less such large sums laid out in cultivating the ground, had there not been a prospect of the same advantages continuing which had induced them to engage.

That no line of adventurers are of more importance to the state, or entitled to better security for the success of their undertakings.

That the unfavourableness of this climate often renders their barley unfit for any other merchant but a distiller; and, from its inferior quality at all times, is despised by every trader who can procure grain from England; though the difference of price should be five or six shillings per boll.

That unless the distillery law is put upon such a footing, as the midling class of Distillers can carry on business, the ruin of the Farmers in this county is inevitable, as it is only those interspersed over the country that can be of general use for consuming the produce of the lands.

That what makes it additionally galling is, that at no time has there been so great an inundation of foreign spirits into this part of the country as at present, when our own grain lies unmanufactured.

That our southern neighbours show an anxious desire to suppress or clog every branch of manufacture in this part of the island that vies with theirs. How easily a little influence can accomplish this end, is grievously experienced in the present calamity; and, from what is felt, the farmer is the next to the manufacturer who must fall a sacrifice.

That, were the legislature properly informed, such partiality would never be countenanced, nor so extensive a part of the community run the risk of being involved in the utmost distress for the enrolment of a few.

That they approve of the Farmers uniting, that, when aggrieved, they may apply in a body for redress; and flatter themselves, that other parishes will see the propriety of the measure.

That they appoint Robert Wight, Thomas Scott, Adam Innes, and John Finnie, or any one of them, delegates from this parish, to meet with the delegates of Kirkcaldon, and such other parishes as shall approve of this method in order to concert measures for obtaining relief, at the Exchange Coffehouse in Edinburgh, upon the second Wednesday of January next, at twelve o'clock noon. And they further agree to contribute their proportion of any expence that may be necessary for bringing about a redress of grievances, by the same proportion as they are assessed for the statute labour. And they appoint these their Resolves to be published in the Edinburgh Evening Courant, the Caledonian Mercury, and Edinburgh Advertiser.

The following CASE is well worth the Attention of the Public.
To Mr HAYMAN, Great Marlborough-street, LONDON.

SIR,
BEING relieved, by the use of your MAREDANT'S DROPS, of one of the most afflicting complaints that human nature can endure, I unfeignedly send you my thanks (by favour of Messrs Husband, Elder, and Co. of Edinburgh, who were privy to my course of your medicine), for publication.

My disorder was of the FISTULA kind, very near the ANUS, which originally seized me (from what cause I know not) with a violent swelling, preventing the natural evacuation of urine, and subjecting me to the most agonizing pain. It came to a head, and suppurated seven different times, issuing such quantities of matter as to reduce me extremely low, accompanied with a continued sickness and total loss of appetite. In this feeble state I had recourse to your drops; when I had taken two bottles only, I perceived myself to recover strength, my sickness left me, and appetite increased; by a further perseverance, I soon became able to return to my daily employ, and in the course of seven bottles every symptom of the disorder vanished. I left off taking the drops about two years; but must confess to you I was lately alarmed at some signs of a return, which made me again have recourse to your drops, and by the time I had taken half a bottle my fears subsided; and I am therefore happy to acknowledge the perfectness of my cure.

COLLINTON,
Four miles West of Edinr.
November 1785.

I am, SIR,
Your obedient humble servant,
GEORGE MUIRHEAD.

N. B. The Commissioners of Stamps having caused the words "J. Hayman, Marlborough-street," to be engraved in the Government label, denominating the duty on each genuine bottle of these drops, it may be deemed a security against a spurious fort. A caution, however, is still necessary against those designing men, who obtrude a composition on the unwary in the name of the late proprietor, Surgeon Norton; whereas the medicines prepared in his lifetime were recalled shortly after his decease, which happened in May 1783; from which time the vendors thereof throughout the kingdom became agents to Mr Hayman, who had the confidential trust and management of this business, both as to the preparation of the medicine and giving advice to the patients, ever since the year 1774.

These drops, which eradicate all scorbutic eruptions, from the most trifling appearance on the skin to those virulent ulcers which endanger the limbs, are sold at 5s. 5d. per bottle, duty included, at Mr Hayman's; and at Messrs HUSBAND, ELDER, and COMPANY'S, Edinburgh.

LANDS IN AYRSHIRE,

SHOPS and HOUSES IN PRINCE'S STREET.

To be SOLD by public roup in the Exchange Coffeehouse, on Wednesday the 18th January next, betwixt five and six o'clock afternoon,

The Lands of WILLOWYARDS, in the parish of Beith, and shire of Ayr, consisting of about 175 English acres of arable land, well inclosed and subdivided into fifteen fields, and let by one lease to three substantial tenants for 19 years at 150 l. per annum.

This farm is pleasantly situated along the side of Kilburny Loch, which abounds with pike and perch. It is within half a mile of Beith, a post and market town, where extensive manufactories are carried on in silk, cotton, and linen. It is eight miles west of Paisley on the road to Irvine, and in the exact center between Paisley, Irvine, Kilmarnock, and Greenock. Upon this property there is a good house, and garden stocked with fruit trees, and an elegant court of offices newly erected.

A valuable Flag and Stone Quarry has been opened in the ground; and it is believed there are both coal and limestone in it, but both these articles are in such plenty, and so near indeed, that no essay has been made for them.

There are about ten acres of wood, and a good deal of timber on this farm; and thriving belts of planting surround the greatest part of it. The tenants are bound to preserve the planting and woods, which are fully fenced.

The situation of the estate is pleasant, part of it being bounded by the water of Ayr. It is at no great distance from coal and limestone, which can be brought at a small expence, as the great road from Cumrock to Ayr by Mauchline goes through part of the estate. The lands are holden blench of the Prince, and entitle the proprietor to two freehold qualifications. The tenants pay one half of the cess or land tax; the other half thereof, and the minister's stipend, are paid by the proprietor.
